Gentlemen:

We are publishing a series of historical readers written by Ramon Coffman and called the Story of America. In the volume now being prepared for publication are needed several illustrations of colonial money.

In the book, School History of the United States, published by the World Book Company, there are several illustrations, on page 161 exactly fitting our need. Would it be possible to obtain these illustrations or ones similar (a New Jersey cent and a Massachusetts cent are illustrated) ? If so, please communicate with the undersigned.

Very truly yours,

F. A. OWEN PUBLISHING COMPANY

Gentlemen:

Your request for some photographs of New Jersey and Massachusetts cents at hand. We have no prints of these, as the World Book Company owns the negatives; consequently we should have to rephotograph them. We are in the utmost confusion right now on account of changes in our building, but in about two weeks we expect to do some more photographing, and unless I hear to the contrary, I shall have a negative made of these two cents for you.

Very truly yours,

Curator.

Dear Mr. Wood:

Thank you very much for your prompt reply to our letter, concerning prints of a New Jersey and a Massachusetts cent. You say that the World Book Company owns the negatives and that you will have to rephotograph these two coins before you can send us prints. Before you go ahead with that, could you give us an idea of the cost?

In case we find the cost is not enough to prohibit our obtaining these pictures, could you send us, with the print of the coins mentioned, a picture of a "continental" dollar, used at the time of the Revolution?

Very truly yours,
